Prediction markets are growing fast

Massive upside compared to sportsbooks and news

Fragmentation is a Problem

Inefficient markets hold back the industry

Each prediction market company silos their own markets and application products.

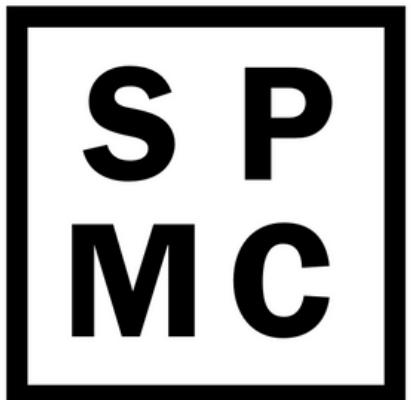

Apps are limited by liquidity and customer demographic

Prediction markets need liquidity to give valuable news to the general public

The Application layer can solve fragmentation

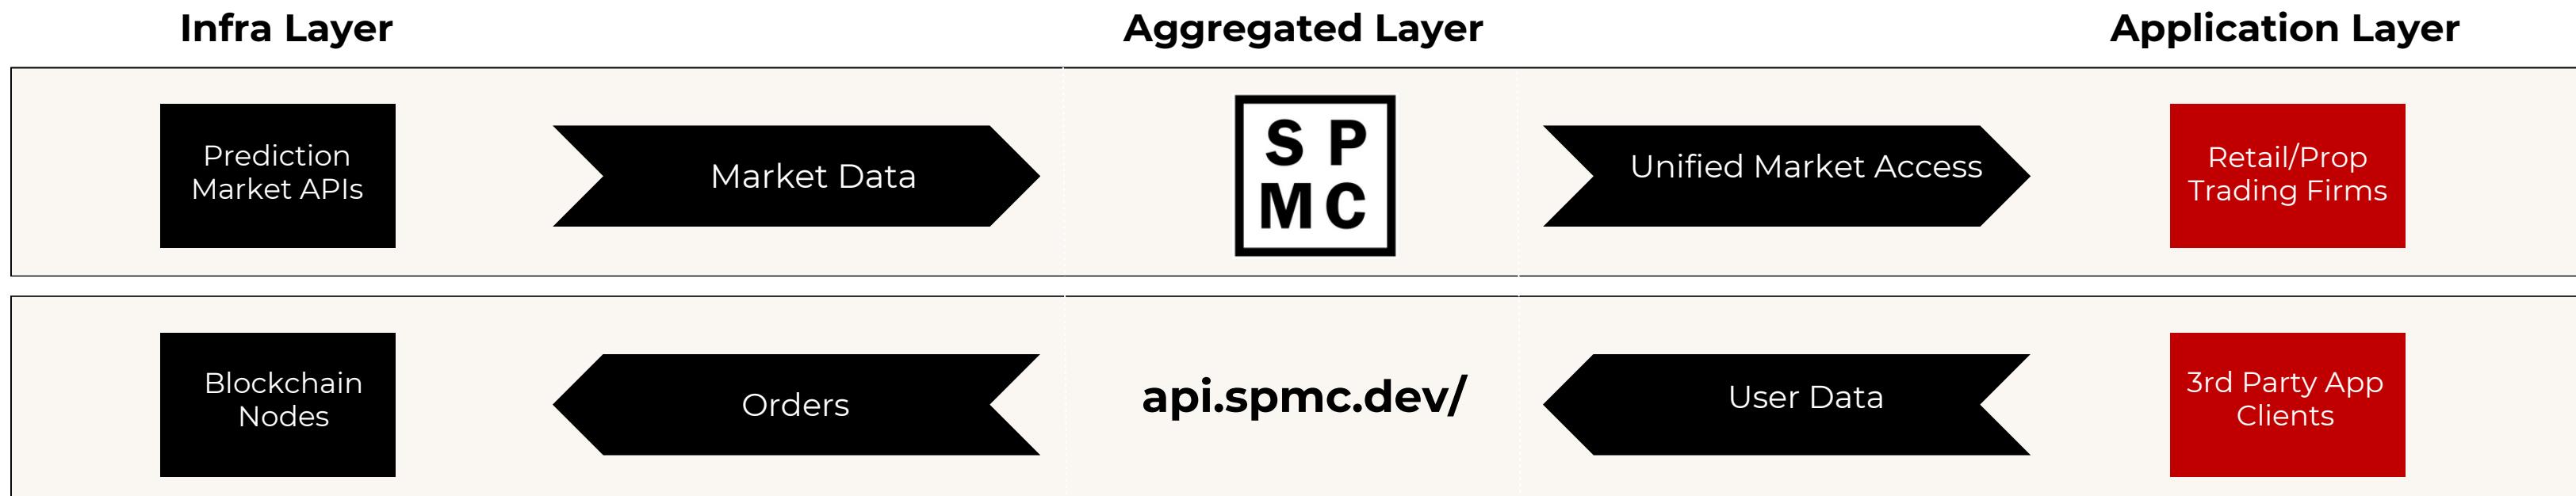

Leverage existing prediction market infrastructure to build new products

...s and driving the transition from print media to digital platforms. Digital media reaches a wider audience, transcending geographical and demographic boundaries, making news and information available to a more diverse audience. Information is now shared across various digital platforms, allowing the press to deliver breaking news in real-time. In the digital age, where people demand instant and accurate access to news, digital media has become more engaging and interactive content formats, such as videos, infographics, and podcasts. This diverse range of content formats enables the press to reach a broader audience than ever before. Digital platforms and social media open up new revenue streams through advertising, sponsorship, and crowdfunding. Diversifying revenue streams in the digital era allows the public to more easily engage in the democratic process. Crowdsourcing, citizen journalism, and user-generated content allow journalists to gather information quickly and efficiently. However, the rise of fake news and misleading information poses a major threat to media outlets and hinders a healthy democratic process. The demand for reliable and credible sources of information is higher than ever. The pressure for journalists to produce high-quality content while maintaining journalistic standards can erode public trust in media outlets and hinder a healthy democratic process. The press that can maintain journalistic quality will continue to play a vital role in society, based on its ability to prioritize thorough fact-checking and reporting. Be open to feedback and criticism from the public. Prioritize thorough fact-checking and reporting. Utilize technological advancements to enhance journalistic quality.
